

CURRICULUM VITAE

Nicolas Kluger, MD

Department of dermatology of the Helsinki University Hospital

Nicolas Kluger (born 1978), MD, is a French dermatologist.

He is currently performing his PhD thesis in the department of dermatology of the Helsinki University Hospital, Finland (Chairman Pr Annamari Ranki) on APECED syndrome. He graduated his medical studies at the Necker - Enfants Malades faculty in Paris in 2002 and performed his residency in dermatology and venereology in Montpellier and Nîmes University hospitals from 2002 to 2008.

After specialization, he was an assistant in dermatology in the department of dermatology in Saint-Eloi Hopital, Montpellier university hospital (Chairman Pr Bernard Guillot). His main fields of interest in dermatology includes healths issues related to body-art (tattooing, piercing...), internal medicine and skin disease, the effects of culture and way on life on skin diseases, skin malignancies and genodermatosis.

He has written currently over 170 articles in indexed journals and several chapters in textbooks. Regarding tattoos and body art issues, he has currently over 50 articles related to that topic as well as lectures, communications and posters in international and national congresses.

He is the member of the French Society of Dermatology, the Finnish Society of Dermatology and the European Academy of Dermatology and Venereology. He is a former expert member of the ad hoc group on tattoo inks at the ASNM (french FDA) and a honorary member of the French tattoo union (SNAT).